PET TIP!

SPEND TIME WITH YOUR PET TO AVOID SEPARATION ANXIETY: During the summer, your pet has been used to having you and other members of your family around on a more consistent basis. With school starting up again, your family won't be around the house and spending as much time with your pet as they were used to. This can lead to pets, especially dogs, developing separation anxiety. To help combat this from happening, make sure to spend some time with your pet when you're home. Take them on a family walk or play with them in your backyard or in your house. Any activity where your pet will get some one-on-one time with you and the members of your family. This will also help your pet get more accustomed to the new schedule with their family being gone during the day.
